With this first issue of volume 32 of Theoria. An International Journal for the Theory, History and Foundations of Science, the process of renewing the editorial team in volume 31 has concluded. At the time, a year ago, the Board of editors was renewed, and Antonio Diéguez (Univ. of Málaga) replaced Valeriano Iranzo (Univ. of Valencia) as general editor in the areas of History and Philosophy of Science, and Science and Technology Studies.

Cristina Corredor (Univ. of Valladolid) has stayed on as editor in the areas of Logic and Philosophy of mind and language, ensuring the continuation of editorial work and functions throughout the renewal process.

On behalf of the Editorial Board I wish to thank Cristina Corredor for her keen dedication and excellent work as editor since she joined us in 2013. She has made decisive contributions to the consolidation of the journal as an effective platform for publishing philosophical results and to its visibility on the international stage. This is reflected by the rise of Theoria. An International Journal for the Theory, History and Foundations of Science in the most prestigious worldwide rankings. So, in the 2015 Scimago Journal Rank, Theoria ranked Q1. Cristina will continue to be associated with the journal as an advisor.

I would like to welcome María José García-Encinas (Univ. of Granada), who will work as editor in the areas of Logic and Philosophy of mind and language, replacing Cristina Corredor.

Having completed the renewal process, we have every confidence that the new editorial team will ensure the best conditions in order to consolidate and further improve the tool that we intend Theoria. An International Journal for the Theory, History and Foundations of Science to be for the international philosophical community.
